Divided Coverage this period centers on continuing Hasakah protests and Kurdish integration talks, Israeli incursions in the south, renewed flooding in Aleppo and Idlib, the Houthi strike on Medina drawing Syrian condemnation, and diplomatic moves like the US arms ban lift and banking reintegration. Public reaction is split along community lines: Arabic commenters mock official slogans and express fatigue over prices and governance, Kurdish-language audiences voice suspicion over integration promises and anger at anti-Kurdish rhetoric in Hasakah, and international audiences mix cynicism about US/Israel policy with solidarity messages. Outlets largely stick to official and procedural framing while public commentary is more skeptical, sarcastic, or anxious.
