Divided Outlets this cycle emphasized investment pledges (Eagle Hills, Netherlands, World Bank, IMF reforms), continued Israeli incursions in Quneitra and Daraa, Russia's base deal and Assad asylum, and a tragic cave-collapse death of three young men in Deir ez-Zor. Public reaction was split between hope over economic recovery and investment news, anger and mockery over Suwayda/Israel-related accusations, weary resignation about Israeli strikes becoming routine, and grief over the cave deaths and viral reunion videos. Kurdish-language voices continued to frame north-east integration and SDF/Kurdish rights issues very differently from Arabic-speaking commenters, with distrust toward both Damascus and Ankara. Sectarian and politically charged comments around Suwayda and the Druze question showed significant polarization and some flagged copy-paste sloganeering.
