Skeptical The dominant story is the Reuters report of secret Syria-Hezbollah talks in Turkey, which Damascus and Ankara both deny; public reaction ranges from skepticism toward Western media to concern about what denial might be hiding. Infrastructure problems continue to dominate daily concerns, with the Tishreen gas explosion worsening blackouts and heavy rains flooding Aleppo streets, prompting angry commentary about municipal failures. Security incidents (the Masyaf bus attack on Alawite workers, Deir Ezzor checkpoint bombings) and Israeli incursions in Quneitra and Daraa continue to generate fear and anger, while the US lifting arms export restrictions is seen by some as positive and mocked by others as renewed dependency on Washington.
